

The Referee's Sporting Chat

—By J. M. F.—

The newly organized Boys' club water polo team consisting of forwards, Haughey and Learned; center, H. Learned; guards, Sweeney and Mountain and goal tender, Pomeroy, have opened a challenge to any water polo team in Berkshire county.

Coach Gets Good Start

Bob Boyd of this city has started off in great shape as coach of the New York university freshman baseball team. His club has won all three games played and among the victims were the Yale freshmen and West Point freshmen.

At Bennington, Vt., they finally have admitted that the basketball season is over. The final game was played Friday night, the Bennington A. A. defeating the Howitzers, 47 to 41 and taking the city championship three games out of four. J. F. Farrell of Dalton was referee and G. N. Messer of Williams college umpire.

Hartley Still Fighting

Pete Hartley is still fighting. His weight is given as 141. I would be more interested in learning his age. He fought Red Magee, whoever he is, in a 10-round bout at the 102d Medical Regimental armory and the affair was declared a draw. Hartley has solved the problem of perpetual youth.

This Game Was Rough

Ed Wachter of Troy, N. Y., Harvard basketball coach, recently played in an Old Timers' basketball game at Boston. He writes his close friend Gregory Kelly of this city that everything but murder was tried and accomplished in that game. Ed's team won, 38 to 35.

Chance to Earn Food

The Hillies who can hit triples or home runs at Waheonah park will be able to eat often and much. The Garde restaurant is to give a $5 meal ticket for every Pittsfield player that makes a home run at Waheonah park and the Hub lunch will give a meal ticket for every triple.

Attractive Main Bout

Tom Garvey, matchmaker of the Pittsfield A. C., has arranged a main go for Monday evening of next week that seems attractive. Johnny Vacca of Boston and Al Beauregard of Waterbury are good fighters. The Hub boxer has had more experience than Beauregard but the Connecticut boy is a hard puncher. If Vacca is as good as he used to be, he should win but Beauregard can be counted on to make it a great go.

Giving Out Schedules

The Berkshire Loan & Trust company for the 10th season has issued schedules of the home games of The Hillies. About 4000 copies in booklet form have been published. Half of the number has been distributed already and persons desiring to obtain them can do so at the bank any time or on Saturday at Waheonah park where they will be handed out. The schedule as printed can be tucked in a pocket without being cumbersome.

Rain Hurts The Hillies

All games in the Eastern league have been washed out for two days and it is possible that not a wheel will turn in the circuit today. The Crane. In fact the British expert says that it was the most dramatic thing that has yet happened in golf. He refers to Oulmet as the golfing David who slew two Goliaths.

The Cohens Are Coming

It seems that the Cohens are coming into their own in as far as baseball is concerned.

All who read the sports pages, know of the sudden rise to fame of Andy Cohen, the Giants' second sacker, and now it seems that he has a brother, Sid Cohen, who is playing with the San Francisco Seals of the Pacific Coast league.

Jim Keesey, who was, by and large, the shining member of the Hartford club last season and who now is playing the first bag for Portland in the Coast league, sends us this clipping, which contains the interesting information that the Cohens are products of El Paso and of the University of Alabama:

"Andy Cohen, the Jewish boy whose second basing for the Giants has New Yorkers so excited, has a brother in the Coast league. Andy's brother is Sid Cohen, and he is a recruit right-handed pitcher with the San Francisco Seals. Sid is 22 years old and an exceedingly handsome young man—what is more to the point in Nick Williams' mind, he also has a handsome fast ball.

From John Joseph McGraw's frequent outpourings on the topic of his Jewish second baseman, Andy Cohen, you'd sort of suppose that Andy and Sid had their upbringing in the New York Khetto. The joke of it is that until Andy joined the Giants he had never seen the Ghetto!

"I should say we're not from the Ghetto," grinned the likeable and handsome Sid. "El Paso, Texas, is our home. We've lived there ten years. But we didn't break into league baseball from El Paso, but from the University of Alabama, which we attended two years."

"Wonder who's the baseball coach at the University of Alabama? He must be a wonder—look over the men he's sent into professional baseball.

Joe and Luke Sewell, both with Cleveland now; Riggs Stephenson, with the Chicago Cubs; Ike Boone, the large Beaver outfielder, and now Andy Cohen and his pitching brother Sid. Quite a graduating class from one varsity team in a few years. So far, not an Alabama candidate has shivered yet." A. B. M. Ginley in Hartford Times.

Hagen-Compston Match

International rivalry will reach a high pitch when Walter Hagen and Archie Compston meet in their challenge match April 27 and 28 over the picturesque hills and valleys of Moor Park, England, says the associated Press.

The king of American professionals and Compston, who has pocketed several of the finest prizes of English links competition, will be urged on by the lure of £750, or about $3750, which each has posted in support of his claim to supremacy. The two famous pros will battle through 72 holes, extended over consecutive days.

Hagen's repeated triumphs in the classics of American and British golf make him the logical favorite among England's countless followers of the ancient and honorable. But Compston's great power and his recognized knack of playing brilliantly on occasion guarantee a thrilling fight for the nice fat pod which the stakes provide.

Sardonically the match will be played
