Postmortems

By BOB INGRAM

Kane Popular

HAVING STOOD the test in the Copper league Harry Kane is one of the most popular umpires in the Texas league this season Frank Patterson, "the yeast man," brings this message back to El Paso after "watching 'em over" from several Texas league stands.

"He is the only umpire Ft. Worth likes," Patterson says. And Ft. Worth treats some of her umpires none too courteous.

One of the arbitrators assigned to Ft. Worth after a stormy game took a run for the dressing room, closely pursued by hostile fans. Unable to open the dressing room door quick enough he climbed over the club house and escaped in an automobile.

The Copper league is probably a better test for umpires than any league in the country. If an umpire can finish a Copper league season with any degree of success he is capable of "calling 'em" almost anywhere else.

True Prediction

BUSTER GEHRIG'S phenominal home run hitting this season, brings to mind the prediction of an El Paso fan, Harry McKemy, who attended the world's series last fall.

"Watch Gehrig next year," McKemy said after the series. He's going to outshine Babe Ruth."

Columbia Lou impressed McKemy more than any other player he saw in action during the series.

The Yankee's slugging first baseman is now two home runs ahead of the Babe and even if he doesn't finish the season in the lead he has proved to be the biggest rival of Babino in recent years.

McKemy, by the way is a type of a fan, that one won't see once in a blue moon. Very seldom does he miss a baseball game and for that matter any athletic contest. He has just recently returned from California where he attended many Pacific league games.

Not Discouraged

SYDNEY COHEN will not let his return trip from the New York Giants discourage him. He realizes that he was working under a big handicap by trying out with the Giants this late in the season.

McGraw hardly had time to notice the El Paso star in practice, but Roger Bresnaham, one of the Giant coaches, told him he looked good at first base and at the bat.

Sydney is young yet and should get numerous other chances to go higher in the game. He plans to finish the Copper league season with El Paso and then go back to Alabama university. He has two more years of schooling there before he goes into baseball for good.

Andy will be recalled from Buffalo in the International league to New York city, it is rumored in Gotham, Syd says. "One of the New York players told me he had heard that Andy will be recalled in September," Sydney adds. Which means that Andy probably will be with the Giants next spring when they start their pre-season training.
